

1. ROXY PENNY ARCADE JACKET >> With duck down inside and houndstooth graphics outside, this puffy fared well during cold days on the slopes and in town. $230; roxy.com 2. THE NORTH FACE MORGAN JACKET >> This soft shell is lined with a “bunny fur” fleece liner that’s so soft and fuzzy you’ll think it’s real. The polyester face isn’t waterproof but sheds snow well. $229; thenorthface.com 3. ARC’TERYX STINGRAY >> On stormy, wet days in the Sierra Nevada, testers swore by the Stingray. It’s made of waterproof-breathable Gore-Tex Soft Shell, which is both supple and tough. Bonus: It’s equipped with a Recco avalanche-rescue reflector. $499; arcteryx.com 4. ISIS WHISPER HOODIE >> Bring this 650-fill-down puffy on your next hut trip. At just 19 ounces, it stuffs into a sack the size of a small melon. It’s cut just above the hip, which means it’s perfect for wearing with a backcountry pack. $189; isisforwomen.com 5. HELLY HANSEN GOODNIGHT JACKET >> In a single day skiing at Colorado’s Arapahoe Basin, we received four compliments on this striped, belted jacket. Style points aside, it’s also waterproof with fully taped seams, though it doesn’t breathe as well as its competitors. $200; hellyhansen.com 6. SPYDER VISION JACKET >> This coat is a two-in-one piece: a zip-in reversible vest (insulated with synthetic fill) plus a water-resistant nylon shell. Wear the combo on a cold day, then sport the flower-printed vest at the bar later that night. $350; spyder.com

HOT

It's 7 P.M. and dumping snow, which bodes well for tomorrow but not your date tonight. The options look bleak: Throw an old puffy coat over your black cocktail dress or risk hypothermia with a soggy sweater. Enter Erin Isakov, a Brown University-educated fashion designer who started Erin Snow—with its unique take on winter apparel—three years ago. Wrap that January party dress in this fall's Morgen Coat, a calf-length, 600-fill-down jacket with two-way zipper and a water-resistant, silky shell. It feels as soft and cozy as a sleeping bag but won't look out of place in Crested Butte or on 5th Avenue.
